

RISING ABOVE LOCKDOWN

and Beyond Thru E-Missions

Synopsis:

Is there a role for technology in the Church today? When we were plunged into a new normal as Covid-19 disrupted our lives, we have experienced how technology can complement and even enhance our initiatives towards authentic discipleship and intentional discipling (ADID).

- ✓ Find out what missions is like in the digital space
- ✓ Understand why we go the digital way during lockdowns
- ✓ Learn about the different E-Missions areas you can serve in

I am a student and an e-host.

Whatever your vocation in life is, you can be an E-Missionary. Come find out more from this webinar!

I am a gym instructor and an online responder.

Speakers

Simon Seow
Senior Digital Specialist
Campus Crusade for Christ, Orlando

Simon cares about bringing the unchanging Gospel to a changing generation. God has written this burden into his story through making him a creative person who gets energised by ideas, innovations, and strategies, and loves seeing lives impacted when the Gospel is creatively and clearly communicated. He first experienced this through launching and leading the Creative Communications (music, film, arts, digital) ministry team in Cru Singapore. A worship leader in Covenant EFC, he is a co-founder of Indigitous and serves as a Senior Digital Strategist with the Global Digital Strategies Vice-President team of Cru in Orlando. He is married and a shepherd of three teenagers.

Lai Zi Jian
Thrust Leader
Covenant E-Missions

He is your atypical geek, passionate about coding, passionate about Korean food and passionate about God. If you are interested, in any of the above, feel free to drop him a text! Apart from his day job as a software engineer, he is leading the projects team at Indigitous, a Christian digital community, and heads the E-Missions thrust in Covenant EFC. He strongly believes that technology can and should be used to bless the world.
